

Communication base station EMS service tax rate

Do MSPs pay communications tax?

Communications tax can be tricky for MSPs because they often offer a variety of services in diverse categories. For example, they may provide Wi-Fi, voice service for a call center, and cloud storage. Each of these services could be subject to separate communications tax rates and rules that vary across state and local jurisdictions.

What is communication service tax?

There's no single communication service tax. The term communications tax refers to a multitude of taxes, fees, and surcharges assessed at the federal, state, and local levels. In addition, many businesses that are subject to communications tax must also pay sales and use tax on their products and services.

Do I have to pay taxes on a telecommunications service?

Depending on the types of communications you provide customers or that your products access, you might be liable to collect and remit taxes and fees including 911 and 988 fees, the Federal Universal Service Fund (FUSF) fee, telecommunications relay services (TRS) fees, utility user tax (UUT), and the communications services tax (CST).

Do you have to pay communications tax?

In addition, many businesses that are subject to communications tax must also pay sales and use tax on their products and services. The wide variety of rates, rules, and regulations across jurisdictions makes communications tax compliance especially difficult and some states are trickier than others.

Should communications tax providers be included in tax bases?

As communications tax authorities work to catch up with the pace of technology innovation, there is some confusion for providers. If your company is selling the latest and greatest products and services, there may be controversy about their inclusion in various tax bases.

Are sales and use tax engines good for telecommunications companies?

Sales and use tax engines are not built to handle the complex tax and fee needs of telecommunications providers. And each time your company returns filing is limited to sales and use tax, it increases your risk of a potential communications tax audit resulting in hefty fines and penalties.
